

YMX – making headlines for all the right reasons

Yokogawa Marex are featured in this week's Isle of Wight County Press, the Island's local newspaper, to help recruit talented members to join our team.

With a sustained growth history for the past ten years, we are continuing to expand and we currently have vacancies for software developers and software testers to join the team based in Cowes. We develop innovative software and IT solutions for process industries including oil refineries, chemical and petrochemical plants for our global customer base.

ADVERTISER'S ANNOUNCEMENT

Innovative software company seeks talented team members

By Kate Cranwell

YMX-based Yokogawa Marex employ more than 40 Island staff and always aims to recruit and develop talent locally. In the past ten years, it continues to expand its operations to new markets and has received numerous awards for its achievements.

In a recent period covering the Christmas season, the company has secured 20,000 orders in more than 200 offices across the world.

YMX has a successful suite of software products, which have been developed in-house for a wide range of process industries, such as oil refineries and chemical or petrochemical plants.

The products are provided in a range of formats, including on-site, cloud-based and mobile devices.

YMX is wholly dependent on the skills, competence and capability of its staff to deliver its products and services to its customers through a holistic approach to people management.

It recognises the value of staff and their contribution to the success of the business and rewards them with appropriate benefits and compensation.

If you would like to join YMX's expanding team on the Island, take a look at the advertised vacancies below.
